Answering important questions and the spirit of competition have always been the drivers for the scientific research conducted over the years. However, in recent years, a third requirement has begun to make its mark: interdisciplinarity. As a result during the period of 25th to 31st July 2016, the 3rd edition of this symposium will be held in Cluj-Napoca, Romania. The participants will have the opportunity to present their research along with their results and most important, to express their vision in their sphere of interest. Furthermore, establishing friendly relations will help these enthusiasts of biological sciences to develop both personally and professionally.

YRBS is a place where open-minded people bring forward ideas that are discussed in the friendliest, objective and multidisciplinary manner. The mixture of bachelors, masters and PhD students from all over the world allows each idea to be discussed between participants with different backgrounds, providing useful and meaningful feedback. Every subject, every thesis has its own spark of knowledge that can give this world the answers to big questions. This creates a healthy environment for developing ideas and new relationships. As peers, the participants attending this symposium gain experience and polish skills required in the scientific community. Taking into consideration each person's unique character, we offer the possibility of both presentation and poster sessions.

Our symposium is a fresh enactment in the International Symposium area, and is being organized by OSpN (Students for Nature Organization) and ISIS (Institute for Science and Innovation in Society), along with our host, the Faculty of Biology and Geology from the Babeş-Bolyai University.

A factor that shapes the healthy environment offered by this event is the location. Cluj-Napoca is known as the heart of Transylvania, a place full of rare sights and beautiful traditions, which was shaped by the unique intercultural aspect of the population. We're also taking great pride in the young people who actively participate in activities in order to leave their mark in the everchanging face of the city. Due to the combined effort of the city community, Cluj-Napoca was voted European Youth Capital in 2015. The people that have been here in previous editions have experienced it first hand, some have come to be fond of it, and we hope that you will come to appreciate it too.

In such a short time, we managed to create a fruitful scientific community for the participants and we will continue to be the catalyst of this network. We are looking forward to see you become a part of it.
